SELMIA.—Our thanks are due and conducially tendered to the Editors of the Times and Southern Argus, for their kindness, courtesy and friendly assistance in business during our stay in Selma last week. The people of Selma have just cause to be proud of these papers. Indeed we are proud of them at this distance, not only as un-passed in neatness of execution, but as a able political organ of sterling integrity, and valuable in every business a poet.

We were pleased to see improvement rapidly progressing, notwithstanding the discouragements to which the citizens of Selma have been subject in consequence of frequent and heavy losses by fire. A number of large and handsome business houses are now in process of erection.

We heard some complaint while there of the loss of trade from this section, in consequence of the cheap through freights north, established some months since, and some other causes; but these causes must necessarily be temporary in their bearing, and the old and natural trade relations soon re-established.

We are not sufficiently versed in business transactions to assert that the rush of cotton north by this low through rate, has had anything to do with the recent heavy decline in cotton; but should not be surprised if it had done its part. At all events it does seem to us that it cannot be good policy in Southern planters, for the sake of saving some fractions of a cent in freight, to rush their cotton heedlessly to the north, thereby favoring the opinion of a large crop, and placing themselves at the mercy of speculators and ringers, who will combine to run cotton down till they get what they want, and then shut it up when it is out of the hands of the planter. Better sell only what will supply their imperative necessities, and then store the remainder a short time with competent and faithful Commission Merchants, such as abound in Selma and Mobile, until they get a fair price, as according to the true size of the crop.

Although the unusually hot summer caused considerable fear of sickness, Selma we were informed, had been healthy, for then for a number of years past.

CALHOUN AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

We would again call attention to the annual meeting of the Agricultural Society of Calhoun County, to be held on the second Thursday in October next, instead of the first Thursday. By mistake we published heretofore that it would be on the first Thursday in October.

It will be the first annual meeting of the Society, and will be one of vast interest, not only to its members, but also to the entire county.

The meeting will be attended by several speakers of ability, who will deliver addresses on subjects of interest, which we have no doubt will be instructive and beneficial to the agriculture of the country, not the plowman, which is to take place on that occasion, is going to be an interesting affair. We also have many speakers with confidence of winning the people and carrying off the new two-hour-touring-plot to be presented. We shall wait with anxious interest to see what our old friends will do.

There is no doubt in the minds of all that the man will be. It is a fine opportunity for some man to get a fine plot of the latest improved style, that would otherwise cost him from ten to twenty dollars. And it is the interest of each to try to see who it is the neighbors of the successful contestants can find, have the benefit of seeing the advertising, or, if any, afforded by the plow, or if none are afforded by it, they will then know it will not do to purchase, and consequently need not risk the investment to buy one on uncertainty.

We would again urge the young men to come up prepared to enter the contest, and take their chance for the prize.

There is at present a representative from White Plains, Peck's Hill, Alexandria, Jacksonville, and Peck's Hill, and should be at least one from every beat in the county, if not three or four.

We find the bill will well deserve complimentary notice of one of our former townsmen and his prosperous business, in the Selma Times of 20th ult.

receive and bear off the prize that may be awarded.

A County Fair would have been held here this year, but the Society had not time nor means sufficient to purchase suitable fair grounds and erect proper buildings, but will have that all arranged by another year.

What is Oxford, Cross Plains, Rabbit Town, Ladings and other beats in the county doing? Will not they each send in a representative for the contest? or will they allow Jacksonville, Peck's Hill, Alexandria, or White Plains to take the prize offered? We wait to see.

We call the especial attention of planters and shippers of cotton, to the advertisement of Messrs. STELLENWERCK & BROS., Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants of Selma and Mobile. We presume we may safely say there is not a more competent and reliable firm in this line of business in the State, or one more faithful and vigorous to the interest of their patrons, we therefore confidently commend them to the confidence and patronage of planters in this section of the State.

Messrs. E. L. Woodward & Son are the Agents for this house in Jacksonville.

The attention of persons interested is respectfully invited to the advertisement of Messrs. McCLELLAND & CASSIE, Rectifiers and wholesale dealers in Foreign and Domestic Liquors, Tobacco, Cigars, &c., Selma, Ala. As the best recommendation we could give these gentlemen, we copy the following notice of themselves and business, from a late number of the Selma Times, a paper published in the city of their residence.

These gentlemen are enterprising and energetic business men, strictly honest in all their dealing, and we commend them to the patronage of the public. Mr. Syd Woods, a polite and affable gentleman, and deservedly popular with all who know him, is at their house, and will always be found on hand to meet the requirements of the house with a pleasant word and genial smile.

The end of Mr. B. M. Woolsey, Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, of Selma may be found in our advertising column today. Those who are acquainted with the gentleman in this section will bear me out in the assertion that he is an educated, intelligent, shrewd, prompt, and reliable business man; one whose judgment of the fluctuations of the cotton market, and fidelity to the interests of his patrons is unapproached by any man in the State.

POST B. Y.

Falling Leaves.

They are falling, swiftly falling,
Thick upon the forest side,
Severed from the noble branches,
Where they waved in beauteous pride.
They are falling in the valleys,
Where the early violets spring,
And the birds in early spring time.
First their dulcet music sing.

They are falling, sadly falling,
Close beside our cottage door;
Pale and faded, like the loved ones,
They have gone forever more.
They are falling, and the sunbeams
Shine in beauty soft around;
Yet the faded leaves are falling,
Falling on the mossy ground.

They are falling on the streamlet,
Where the silvery waters flow,
And upon its placid bosom
Onward with the waters go.
They are falling in the church yard,
Where our kindred sweetly sleep;
Where the idle winds of summer
Softly o'er the loved ones sweep.

They are falling, ever falling,
When the autumn breezes sigh,
When the stars in beauty glisten
Bright upon the midnight sky.
They are falling, when the tempest
Moans like ocean's hollow roar,
When the tuneful winds and billows
Sigh for evermore.

They are falling, they are falling,
While our saddened thoughts still go
To the sunny days of childhood,
In the dreamy long ago.
And their faded hues remind us
Of the blighted hopes and dreams
Faded like the falling leaflets
Cast upon the icy streams.

Thrilling Adventure.

A correspondent of the New York Sun recently met at Calville, Nevada, which is regarded as the head of navigation on the Colorado. Mr. James White, who in late years made the passage of the canon. With Henry Strade and Captain Baker, of the late Confederate army, he left Colorado City May 25th, 1867, on foot, with two pack mules to carry provisions, tools and blankets, for the purpose of prospecting in the San Juan Valley for gold. After several weeks' travel, they struck the San Juan river, but not finding sufficient promise in the sands, went westward, and at length reached Grand river, the banks of which were masses of perpendicular rock, 2,000 feet high. Both men and animals suffered for water, and it was a day before they could reach the stream which dashed and foamed in the canon.

On the eleventh day he was taken on shore by some Yampais Indians, who would probably have killed him had not one of them interfered and protected him. This humane savage gave the voyager meat and roasted beans to eat, and after a short rest White tottered to his raft and floated downward. Three days afterward he was aroused from stupor by voices—Strong arms were thrown about him, and bearded faces looked pitifully upon him. He was tended and cared for by Mormons of this place, and with his strong constitution soon regained health, and has now no desire to leave the spot where the good Samaritans ministered unto him.

Short Rules in Rural Economy.

Paint all tools exposed to the weather, and if with a light colored paint, they will not heat, warp or crack in the sun.

Dip well seasoned shingles in a lime wash, and dry them before laying, and they will last much longer, and not become covered with moss.

Dip the ends of nails into grease, and they will drive easily into hard wood, where otherwise double and break.

In plowing or teaming on the road in hot weather, always rest the horses on an eminence, where one minute will be worth two in a warm valley.

In setting out young orchards, always register the varieties immediately in a book, where they may be referred to in a few years, when the trees commence bearing, and the labels are lost, and names are forgotten.

In laying a garden for fruits and vegetables, place everything in drills or rows, so that they may be cultivated by a horse, and thus save the expense of hard labor.

When board fences become old, and the boards begin to come off nail upright, facing strips upon them against each post, and the boards will be held to their places and the fence last several years longer.

A Good Farm and a Thrifty Farmer.

Our old friend, Thos. Bonner, Sr., the present proprietor of the well known Kingdusky Place in Clay county, raised this year one thousand bushels of wheat, will gather over three thousand bushels of corn, twenty bales of cotton, has over forty large killing hogs to slaughter, and a goodly number of cattle for sale. He also raised a large crop of oats, peas, potatoes, &c. The place is cultivated almost exclusively by white laborers. A few such farmers in every county would soon restore prosperity and give a land of plenty.

We might also add that Mr. Thos. Bonner, Jr., brought to market the first cotton of the season from Clay.

New Paper.—Mr. Joe A. Walden formerly connected with the Gadsden "Republican Union," has sold his interest in that paper and established a new one at Guntersville, entitled the "Guntersville Post." The Post is thoroughly democratic, as will abundantly appear from the following extract from the Editor's Salutatory:

"Nursed in the cradle of Democracy, and brought up under the protect of shade of its wings, we should feel that we were deserting the father and mother who taught us its sacred lessons—that we were proving treacherous in the hour of peril when a cloud as black as the pall of night hovered over her, its muttering thunder threatening all her noble principles with destruction, were we at this trying hour to desert the old Democracy."

We have received the second number of the Post, which is neatly printed, and bears manifest evidence of being edited with spirit and ability. We cheerfully place it on our exchange list, and wish the publisher great success, politically and financially.

We call special attention to the advertisement of Capt. G. Stipes, who has resumed the mercantile business at his old stand on the north side of the public square. He is an experienced, prompt and accommodating merchant, well known to almost every one of our readers. Many of his patrons of former days will be glad to learn that he is prepared to wait upon them again, by furnishing goods of the best quality and latest styles at low prices. Give him a call and examine his handsome stock.

Mrs. Rowland will continue in the same house, with a beautiful and varied lot of seasonable Millinery, and Fancy Goods, &c.

Tommy & Stewart, wholesale and retail dealers in Hardware, Atlanta, Ga.—We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of these gentlemen in another column. This competent, experienced and reliable firm have a large capital employed in their business, which enables them to sell on terms defying all competition, and are deservedly popular on account of their uniform correct, prompt, liberal and fair manner of dealing in their extensive trade. They are now receiving, as we learn from a citizen of Atlanta, the largest and best selected stock of Hardware ever brought to Atlanta. We are sure that dealers in Hardware, and those who purchase for their own use, could not do better by going further. We heartily wish them success, and cordially and sincerely commend them to the confidence and patronage of the citizens of this section of Alabama.

Beech Market.—We are informed that a report has got about, and is believed by many, that the Town Council of Jacksonville imposes a tax on Beef brought here for sale. This is utterly untrue; the Council imposes no tax whatever. We would further state, for the information of all persons concerned, that farmers can sell beef mutton or other meat of their own production, free from any tax, corporate, State or Federal. It is only those who make a business of buying and selling, that are subject to revenue tax.

Through Freight from New Orleans to Charleston. We have been favored by Mr. J. W. Fullender, Depot Agent at Jacksonville, with a copy of the Freight Tariff to all stations on the Selma, Rome and Dalton Railroad, by the lately established through freight line. We are pleased to learn, that by this line, great facilities, low rates and quick time will be afforded to merchants and shippers, without break of bulk, and thus delay and damage avoided resulting from frequent transfers. This arrangement, we doubt not will go far to restore the much desired old trade relations in the direction of Selma, Mobile and New Orleans.

The special attention of Merchants and shippers, is invited to the advertisement in another column of the "Crescent Fast Freight Line."

We were shown the other day, by G. W. Vansant, some very fine and beautiful samples of cotton, raised by him this year on his farm, 8 miles west of this place. Two of the samples were Brazilian cotton, cream colored and white, one sample Nankin and one common cotton. All the samples were grown under the disadvantages of a protracted drought, yet they are very fine. The superiority of the Brazilian cotton however, in length and fine stalks of staple is very apparent when placed beside the others. We are informed by Mr. V., that the Brazilian cotton seemed more productive with larger stalks than the other kinds, and op-

The experiments thus far made in this county with the few seed of Brazilian cotton brought here, have proved so favorable, both in quality and quantity, that we should suppose it would be to the interest of farmers to raise it extensively, as we are informed the price rules from 50 to 100 per cent. higher than the common cotton.

J. G. Bell & Bro., Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, Selma. The many friends of this competent, reliable and accommodating firm, will be pleased to learn that they can still avail themselves of their valuable and efficient services and assistance. Consign to them Cotton and other Produce, and order Goods, Groceries and Provisions.

See notice of sale of valuable land by Thomas H. Martin, Adm'r.

The FINEST SPECIMEN.—We have received a specimen of Molasses, manufactured from the Florida Chinese Cane, by B. W. Turner and J. Woodley, which is certainly superior in clearness, thickness and fine flavor to any we have seen before. It was made in one of Cook's Patent Evaporators.

Capt. B. J. Harrison will address the Agricultural Society on the 2nd Thursday in Oct. inst., the day of the plow match.

Capt. Harrison is a sterling orator of warm southern sympathies, with the art of entertaining and instructing; and it needs only to be known that he speaks to secure a large audience.

See notice of Noble's new patent durable and cheap Concave Roof.

We are pleased to learn that one of the liberal, energetic and enterprising firms of Smith & Riddle, Oxford, Ala., has just returned from the Eastern market, where he purchased the largest and finest stock of Groceries ever brought to that market. We heartily wish them their well-deserved success and prosperity.

Circuit Court.—The Fall Term of our Circuit Court has been in session since Tuesday week last. Hon. W. L. Whitlock presiding, H. L. Stevenson, Esq., Solicitor. The business of Court has progressed very smoothly, and a number of important cases have been decided.

Judge Whitlock has given entire satisfaction, by his able, equitable and impartial administration of justice. The officers of court also, Clerk, Sheriff, and Bailiffs, have discharged their duties in a prompt, efficient and satisfactory manner. We suppose the court will adjourn this evening.

Dr. O. S. Prohilt has removed his medical head quarters from Covington to Atlanta, Ga.

Jacksonville Female Academy.—The prospects of the above named Institution will doubtless soon greatly improve. The present Principal, B. L. Harkness, late of Summerville, is giving general satisfaction. Parents, pupils, &c., concerned, are very well pleased indeed. Capt. H. seems to be peculiarly well adapted to the management and instruction of young ladies and misses. With him at the head, and the present competent and faithful Assistants, the institution must greatly flourish.

Mr. Editor:

The friends of the Etowah club deem it but justice that an explanation should be made concerning the match game played between it and the Peabody on the 2nd inst. At the time the challenge for the game was received by the Etowahs, the club was willing and anxious to play the game and at once accepted the challenge. It was understood by the club that the first time should play the game on Friday it was found that one count of sickness and other good reasons but three of the first nine could go. The other members of the club not expecting anything of the kind had made no arrangements, and at eleven o'clock Friday night eight members of the club, only members who could go started for Jacksonville. They traveled the greater part of the night, and arrived in your town about eight o'clock, A. M., Saturday. They found their Captain, who had preceded them the day before, too weak to play. An "out-sider" consenting to take his place, thenceforth to play the game and risk the "consequences," of course, were disengaged from the game. The game, as well as the Peabodys had some splendid players but as a whole the play was poor done by both parties each having been "white washed." The Etowahs challenged the Peabodys on the ground after the playing was over for another game, which will come off, on some time.

The greatest courtesy was extended each club by the other and the clubs part ed the best of friends.—OBSERVER.

The New Tennessee Legislature.—Speech from Hon. Emerson Etheridge.

Assembling of the New Legislature—Freedom of Tennessee—What will be Done—Calling of a Convention—Complete Overthrow of the Despotism, &c.

On Wednesday evening last, a large procession of the people of Nashville headed by the Odd Fellows, Cornet Band, repaired to the front of the City Hotel, to welcome with a serenade the Hon. Emerson Etheridge, who had arrived in the city on the morning train from Dresden. Although but limited notice was embracing many of the most influential citizens, filled the area between the hotel and the courthouse, and thronged the hotel balcony, which had been illuminated. Quite a number of ladies were listeners on the balconies of the hotel. So soon as the music ceased, shouts for "Etheridge!" "Etheridge!" loud and continuous, filled the air, in response to which Mr. Etheridge made his appearance on the balcony, when the wildest demonstration of enthusiasm on the part of the crowd greeted our distinguished visitor and Representative.

He was introduced to the audience by Mr. John J. McCann. Mr. Etheridge advanced to the railing, and in the clear, mellow, sonorous, ringing voice of old, whose music was not unfamiliar to Mid-Tennessee ears spoke substantially as follows:—

MR. ETHERIDGE'S SPEECH.

Fellow Citizens:—No man ought to be indifferent to manifestations of public applause and respect. The greatest reward of the public servant consists in the consciousness of purpose and the applause of his fellow citizens. But fifteen years before the war I was but once in Nashville; once during the war, and each time in the public service. I now look down upon a crowd of comparative strangers. To innumerable of you I am personally unknown. I know something of them your Commissioners of Registration must be dispensed with. The so-called franchise law was a cunningly devised engine of oppression.—All parties in the State have, at some time, felt its crushing power.

It has, however, exploded before its time. It makes and builders were overwhelmed in its ruin. It has not told, friends to write its epitaph or preach a decent Christian funeral over its remains.

You may rest assured that the age will be unsparely applied to the root of every evil, so as to admit the Legislature and other departments of State with marked economy. Beyond that I do not wish to see one dollar wrung from the industrious masses of our State. There never was a people to whom the axion more forcibly applied, "sufficient to the day is the glory thereof."

The past with all its good or evil is forever gone. The future is not yours. The present, the active, living present is yours, its duties and responsibilities furnish sufficient labor for all. Let us go forth with impudent step in the discharge of every patriotic and public duty trusting to heaven for the coming of that auspicious day when none but the good deserve and none but the brave attain.

I thank you, my countrymen, for this greeting, and I bid you all a kind and respectful good night.

At the conclusion of Mr. Etheridge's speech the applause of the assembled throng rang out again and again on the right air, and the band immediately struck up a national air at the conclusion of which the crowd dispersed.

Circuit Court.

The fall term of the Talladega Circuit Court met yesterday at A. M., his Honor Judge Charles Palkau presiding. F. M. Shouse, Sheriff; Jas. Collier, Clerk.—

There being no juries drawn for this term of the Court, the Judge instructed the Sheriff to summon jurors out, and adjourned Court until 8 A. M., today.

The Court was called at 8 A. M., this morning, and the Sheriff returned his venire of grand jurors, whomsoever nomination was made by the State's Solicitor to discharge said jury, is illegal and void. Afterable argument for the invalidity of the same was made by the State's Solicitor, and he was removed from his office by the Supreme Court of the Universe, at whose behest we lay in humble submission, trusting this dispensation of his providence may result in some good, and that this summons to our deceased brother will bring upon the minds of the living that we are not mortal, and can cause us to live up to and in accordance with the principles indicated by our order.

Resigned. That we tender to the widow and family of our deceased brother, our most sincere confidence in their bereavement.

Resolved, 2nd, That we as a Lodge attend his funeral, and wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, 3d, That the foregoing Resolutions be published in the Jacksonville Republican, and that a copy of the same be sent to the widow and family of the deceased.

It is believed by many that the labors of the incoming Legislature will be beset with difficulties, but do not think it will be so. It is true we are in a transition state, that condition which, in the history of communities, is fruitful in two classes of public leaders whose counsels we ought to abide by with caution. I abide by those who are fixed in their attachment to old ideas and institutions, which a progressive age has outgrown, and those who, never knew that all change is not practical, reform, and who would substitute for the Statute that did not grow with the country, as such a Statute was—cannot be said to be fit for the use of a wise nation.

PO BOX.

BY AND BY.

By and by! We say it softly,
Thinking of a tender love,
Stirring always in our bosoms,
Where so many longings grope.

By and by! Oh love shall greet us
In the time that is to come,
And the fears that now defeats us,
Then shall all be stricken dumb!

By and by! The mournful sorrows
Clouded o'er our sky to-day,
Shall be gone in glad to-morrow—
Shall be blasted quite away!

By and by! We say it gently,
Looking on our silent dead,
And we do not think of earth-life,
But of Heaven's sweet life instead.

By and by! We look in yearning
Towards the harbor of the blest,
And we see the beacons burning
In the ports of perfect rest.

By and by! Our ships shall anchor,
If the tide and wind run fair,
Some day in the port of Heaven,
Where our lost and loved ones are.

By and by! Oh say it softly,
Thinking not of earth and care,
But the by and by of Heaven,
Waiting for us over there!

A Travelling Adventure.

"Glorious Rome!" exclaimed Miss Julia Brandon, as she leaned back in the traveling carriage, beside her gouty old guardian, Ebenezer Brown, Esq., alderman of the city of London; as it slowly rolled up the way from Terrenate to Foudi, on the route to Naples—shall I never see these again?

"Not with my consent," growled the old fellow. "Rome's a humbug."

"What! St. Peter's?" cried the young lady.

"Can't hold a candle to St. Paul's," grunted the alderman.

"And the Coliseum?"

"Very much out of repair," said the alderman.

"The carnival?"

"Nonsense!"

"The illumination?"

"Stuff!"

"The pictures?"

"Smoky dabs!"

"The art?"

"Pshaw! now I know what you're thinking of—that confounded Claude Crayon who was always dawdling around you. Do you know he had the impudence to ask my permission to pay his addresses to you?"

"And what did you tell him?" inquired the young lady eagerly.

"I told him to go to the—"

"Hush!" said the young lady, putting her soft hands upon her guardian's lips.

"I'm ashamed of you."

"I am ashamed of you!" retorted that alderman, "for thinking twice of a shabby fellow without a penny—who who are to come of age in three months and into the possession of fifty thousand pounds."

The young lady was silent, and looked out of the dark, gloomy valley this is we are passing through," she said, by way of changing the conversation. "It looks the very place for brigands. I wish you had taken an escort."

"Pshaw!" said the alderman, "I don't believe in robbers." These stories of brigands are got up by the maddening, thieving Italians as an excuse for increasing the expense of travelers. But if I am to be robbed, I'd rather be plundered by fellow who make it a regular profession, than robbers who pick your pockets under pretense of serving you. And the carabiniers always run at the first shot, and come back when it is all over, to conclude with you and ask for drink money. Hullo, there! Pietro!"

Pietro was the courier, and was riding on the box with the coachman. On hearing his name called, he turned round promptly, and answered with a servile grin.

"Excellency?"

"Did you load my pistol?"

"Yes, your highness, and put them in the pockets of the carriage."

"All right then. Drive on."

But at this moment there was a crack, and down came the carriage, nearly overturning in its fall. The coachman and courier sprang up quickly, and while the former saw to the horses, the latter extricated the inmates, more frightened than hurt. The Finch pins had come out and two of the wheels had rolled off—the harness was broken and there was no getting on till that had been patched up with ropes.

While the alderman was fuming and raving at the accident, Miss Julia pulled out her drawing-book and was beginning to sketch the scene, when a shrill whistle was heard. The coachman and courier, crying out "brigands" crossed themselves and left that upon their faces.

Four armed men, in the picturesque costume the stage has made so familiar with, rushed from the bushes. Julia screamed. Her guardian succeeded in getting out one of his pistols, and fired at the foremost without hitting him. The robber knocked the alderman's pistol from his hand and pulled his hat off; over his eyes tripped him up, and tied him head and foot with a bit of rope.

He then threw his arm around Miss Brandon's waist, and followed by his companions, hurried into the woods that clothed the steep-hill by the road side.

"Fear nothing," he whispered, "it is I—Claude Crayon. Don't you know me?"

Claude" exclaimed the lady, recognizing her lover in spite of his disguise.

"How could you do such a thing?"

"Desperate cases require desperate remedies," replied the artist. "You were about to lose me forever—so my friend and myself planned this rescue."

I bade the courier to draw the bullets from your guardian's pistols—for I thought even you, romantics as you are, wouldn't wish me to hazard life and limb in the adventure. The breaking down of the carriage was a part of the programme. Now you shall decide my fate. If you love me, you will fly with me to Naples. There is a carriage waiting for us at the turn of the road. If you cannot pardon my presumption, say but the word—and I will restore you to your guardian."

"You knew how weak and yielding I was and how I have suffered from his impious nature, or you would not have acted as you have done," whispered Julia. "You knew you were pardoned in advance. But you have spoiled all my romance—I thought we were attacked by real robbers and not by masqueraders—Claude! Claude!" she added with a sudden change of manner, "who is that?"

Claude raised his eyes in the direction of hers, and beheld a tall figure, in full brigand costume, advancing from the thickets, carbine in hand, and bending his black brows upon them.

The young painter turned pale.

"Who are you?" he asked intruder.

"That question belongs to me, young gentleman," replied the stranger, "since I find you wearing my livory and intruding upon my domain."

"You assume a lofty tone, sir," replied the artist.

"Pray whom have I the honor of addressing?"

The stranger drew himself up to his full height. "Men call me," he replied.

"Fra Davole."

Claude cast an agonized look at Julia, threw his arm around her waist, and drew a pistol from his pocket.

"Put up that you young man," cried the robber in voice of thunder, "or I'll send a bullet through that fool's head of yours." Resistance is vain. Look around you."

Claude obeyed, and behold, encircling the glade where they stood, a number of ruffianly fellows armed to the teeth. He dropped the pistol with a groan.

"You are free," said the brigand, "you are too poor a prize. A fairer one is ours."

By forest law this maiden is our own. It is a curse for every pain.

POETRY.

Your Mission.

If you cannot on the ocean
Sail among the swiftest fleet,
Rocking on the highest billows,
Laughing at the storms you meet,
You can stand among the sailors,
Anchored yet within the bay;

You can lend a hand to help them,
As th' y a nch' th' boat away.

If you are too weak to journey,
Up the mountains, steep and high,
You can stand within the valley
While the multitude go by;
You can chant in happy measures
As they slowly pass along;

Though they may forget the singer,
They will not forget the song.

If you have not gold and silver
Every ready to command,
If you cannot toward the need
Reach an e'er open hand,
You can visit the afflicted,
O'er the erring you can weep;

You can be a true disciple,
Sitting at the Saviour's feet.

If you cannot in the conflict,
Prove yourself a soldier, too;
If, where fire and smoke are thickest,
There's no work for you to do;
When the battle-field is silent,
You can go with silent tread;

If you want a field of labor,
You can find it ANYWHERE.

IT IS DARK.—The following beautiful sentiments are from Meister Karles's sketch book entitled the "Night of Heaven." It is full of touching tenderness:

From the Duron County (Mich.) News.]

The Power of a Word.

A mother, on the green hills of Vermont was holding by the right hand a son sixteen years old, made with the love of the sea. And as he stood by the garden gate one morning she said:

"Edward, they tell me, for I never saw the ocean, that great temptation of a seaman's life is drink. Promise me, before you quit your mother's hand, that you will never drink."

"And," said he (for he told me the story,) "I gave her the promise, and I went the globe over, Calcutta and the Mediterranean, San Francisco, the Cape of Good Hope, the North and South poles. I saw them all in forty years, and I never saw a glass filled with sparkling liquor that my mother's look by the gate did not rise up before me, and to-day I am innocent of the taste of liquor."

Was not that sweet evidence of the power of a single word? Yet that was not half.

"For," said he, "yesterday there came to my counting room a man of forty years and asked me: 'Do you know me?'

"'No.'

"'Well,' he said, "I was once brought into your presence on shipboard drunk, the captain kicked me aside, you took me to your berth and kept me there till I had slept off the intoxication; you then asked me if I had a mother. I said I had never known a word from her lips. You told me of yours at the garden gate and to-day I am master of one of the finest packets in New York, and I came to ask you to come and see me."

How far that little candle throws its beams! That mother's word on the green hills of Vermont! O, God be thanked for the mighty power of a single word!

It is not too strong for children, nor too weak for the most robust. There is no trouble about taking it, only to unscrew the bottle and drink it whenever you may need it. It has gained a very high reputation in every locality where it has had a fair and honorable chance to prove itself, at any point in America, and it has been used in every State south of Maine, and is like applicable to disorders of the Liver and Digestive Powers at all places yet tried.

under the name of James Woodford, start not—Captain James Woodford is my son, and Caroline was once Caroline Montauk but by name and birth. The last war called to the field many soldiers, and amongst them my noble boy. Oh! how my bosom beat when honored with wounds and high in character. He returned into his native country. The train of circumstances which brought James and Caroline together, you will learn at a future day; suffice it to say that, to my delight they became man and wife, but their uncle either felt or pretended to feel great indignation, and whatever was the motive, his enmity was diabolical and serious. The long minority of Caroline left her uncle undisturbed, and when her husband made demands on her property, they were met by the taunt that they had nothing to receive, but on the contrary a large sum against her, her father was urged. My son was irritated at what he regarded injustice and unconscious of their relationship, personal violence was only prevented by the interference of others. After the most diligent search, not a trace of obligation could be found to substantiate the rights of Caroline to her father's property. Involved in lawsuits and persecuted by a harsh relation, this father and mother is now reduced to indigence, and despite but how will their condition be changed to-morrow.

Now learned something of the once beautiful Sophia Markland. She rose to her feet—her eyes shot with a lustre, I could not behold without astonishment; but she checked her transports and again sat down, sitting at the same time the packet which during her harrowing narrative lay on the table. "You see that broken desk," said she, pointing to the ruined piece. "It shall be mended with clasp of silver."

If I was diverted by any part of the scene I was still more so at what was now placed before me. With great composure Sophia unfolded the papers, and laid them on the table writing downwards—when done, she again addressed me in words not to be forgotten.

"You remember the thunder storm of last week," well, I replied—and well do I remember it," she subjoined "never subject to dread of lightning and thunder, on the contrary from a child I was rather delighted with the awful display, and on the night I have mentioned I was sitting in that outer room viewing the flashes and hearing the echoes from mountain to mountain, when I was stunned by an explosion which seemed to burst from the earth and rend her bowels. My desolate dwelling was struck; you see that split beam. From that the shock fell upon the desk, and throw the fragments out of the room. A remark I had once heard in Philadelphia now occurred to my mind."

"It was that the same place or some object is never, or very rarely, if ever, affected twice by the electricity of the same storm, and that any object once touched by an electric shock, is rarely ever again subject to like accident. I therefore now regarded my cabin in safety, and as storm passed away sought my lone couch, and with the elements was soon at rest."

"The next morning as day strengthened, I say the effect of the stroke of the bolt. The desk was speedily shivered, but those and some other papers arrested my attention, and on examination I found that the back part had contained a secret till or kind of drawer, which bore the explosion its contents lay scattered over the floor. After examining some loose fragments of no moment I picked up the one containing these papers, and now let us glance upon their faces, and learn what they reveal, and here do you know that writing?" saying this she handed me paper and what was my astonishment to see a document written in a hand of great neatness and precision; it was that of a teacher under whose care I had myself learned to write but infinitely greater importance was its tenor. It was a duly executed mortgage, for the money lent by Stephen Montauk to his brother-in-law, and the other documents in the same packet were bonds and other obligations which had been thus so remarkably preserved.

In mingled joy and astonishment, I read these precious records, handing them over to the exuding mother, who again folding them up very carefully while observing, "on—tomorrow a meeting is to take place at Supt. Stanley's—she is not only justice of the peace, but a peace marker. Eltham Heathfield is to meet his injured son.—He shall have one chance more to recede and do justice. Let him refuse and all shall be revealed—If not I need not hope, Eltham is come, and my son and wife and child half-reduced to their rights. You can give to this hand writing come what will. But Stanley's and before mid-day to-morrow."

The reader need not be told that I was at Stanley's at the time appointed, and found by the means of the old square that I was expected. I was first on the ground but had no time to wait. Captain James Woodford was next. His noble countenance was calm, and I could or thought I could see despair and anxiety contending, and I dropped the consequence on his mind of the resolution I knew was to be made. My lips were however sealed. The last words of Sophia Markland, to me in parting, were "Let Heathfield do justice and do what has passed most severely punish him when he comes to the world."

The distressed Woodford was too much occupied with his forebodings of evil to speak much, and for a different reason was silent, but watched with increasing anxiety the path over the field, where I knew the witch would approach. Her figure at length appeared, and when at some distance Woodford observing her, and exclaimed "Good God is that woman to be here?"

I could not refrain from observing, "that woman will do no harm." Woodford regarded me in silent disposure, and conscious of my own imprudence, I felt too awkward to give excuse, nor really had I time, as Sophia entered, and was quickly followed by Heathfield.

"What a meeting between a father and a son," said I, mentally. A scowl of the father, and to the kindly greeting of the old magistrate he scarcely deigned to grumble a reply, and without sitting down, very roughly demanded, "what is the particular object of troubling me to come here, square?" and without allowing me to explain what on, I was not obliged to come in, had I much time to wait."

Every eye in the room was fixed on him, but there was one of intense attiand, which as he closed his rude address to the magistrate drew his full attention, as the question met his ear.—

"Eltham Heathfield, do you intend to do justice to your brother's child?" He evidently shrank from the speaker, but attempted to conceal his feeling by turning to the square and asking in a loud tone, "what has this tag to do with my affairs?"

This to him fatal expression sealed his fate. Sophia had entered the house with her portrait carefully wrapped up, and as the insulting term tag fell from Heathfield, she laid the frame on a table as she rose. Her form always commanding, seemed to gain still natural height.—"Hag," she repeated as Heathfield quailed under her dreadful glance, "and are you prepared to leave who made me a hag? Do you dare to look on that face?" and she unwrapped her portrait and set it before him. The very heart of the man seemed frozen—he had assumed a hue incongruous with his appearance.

A PROCLAMATION.

The year which is drawing to a close has been free from pestilence; health has prevailed throughout the land; abundant crops reward the labor of the husbandman; and manufacturers have successfully prosecuted their peaceful trades; the mines and forests have yielded liberally; the nation has increased in wealth and in strength; peace has prevailed, and its blessings have advanced every part of the Union; harmony and mutual interest have been restored; obliterating the marks of the past conflict and estrangements; bonds have been tightened and means increased; civil and religious liberty are secured to every inhabitant of the land, whose soil is tilled by none but freemen. It becomes a people thus favored to make acknowledgment to the Supreme Author from whom such blessings flow, of their gratitude and their dependence, to render praise and thanksgiving for the same, and devoutly to procure a continuance of God's mercy.

Therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do recommend that Thursday, the 18th day of November next, be observed as a day of thanksgiving and of prayer to Almighty God the Creator and Ruler of the universe; and I do further recommend to all the people of the United States to assemble on that day, in their accustomed places of public worship, and to unite in the homs of praise due to the bountiful Father of all mercy, and in fervent prayers for the continuance of the merciful blessings He has vouchsafed to us as a people.

In testimony whereof I have caused to be affixed this, the 5th day of October, A. D. 1869, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-fourth.

U. S. GRANT.

By the President: HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

Death of Franklin Pierce.

The telegraph conveys to us, as was stated in our issue of the 15th inst., the sad news of the decease of this eminent citizen—an event not unlooked for, on account of the late infirmity of his alarming illness. We must reserve for another occasion any attempt at a fitting notice of the life and character of Gen. Pierce. His death closes the list of the living Presidents chosen directly by the people for that great office. Mrs. Fillmore and Johnson having been both elected as Vice Presidents. A more upright and patriotic citizen has never sat in the Executive Chair first graced by Washington. He was faithful in all things—to his own high character, as a gentleman, to the Democratic party, as he was so distinguished a member, to the Constitution of his country, and to the official oath that bound him to reverence and obey it. Few men were more eloquent in speech or pen, and none more highly-toned in sentiment, or more kindly and courteous in his intercourse with his kind. He was one of nature's noblemen—a gentleman in the highest sense of that expressive term.

The Rev. Wm. H. Milburn, the "blind preacher," has recently returned to New York, after sixteen months' residence abroad, whether he went for the purpose of submitting to an operation for sight, by the eminent Graefe, of Berlin. The experiment was not a success. Mr. Milburn, during his absence, has prepared two new lectures—"What a Blind Man Saw in Paris" and "Blind Man's Experience in Search of Sight"—which he proposes to deliver during the coming lecture season.

NEW DAILY PAPER AT ROME.—We have received several numbers of a new paper, entitled "THE ROME DAILY," published by Moses and Shanks. It is medium in size, neatly printed, and interesting in contents. The Editor and publishers are energetic and enterprising business men, of considerable experience at other points, and will doubtless make their paper equal to any of its class in Georgia. If it does not pay immediately at the start, it cannot remain long unprofitable in that flourishing and rapidly growing young city.

REG. The attention of all Bankrupts who have not yet paid up the full amount of costs due by them, is invited to the Notice of Lionel W. Day, Dist. Clerk, who has appointed H. A. Evans, Esq., of this place to receive and receipt for the same. They would do well to give immediate attention to this matter, as in case of failure, no discharge will be granted and executions will issue for remainder of cost.

REG. In consequence of the continued and unavoidable absence of the Secretary of the Calhoun Agricultural Society, G. L. Turnley, Esq., in attendance on Court, it has been out of his power to prepare the minutes of the annual meeting in time for publication in this paper, as requested by the society. We are requested to say however that the full minutes of the meeting, plowing match and resolutions passed will be published in our next paper.

REG. Increasing Casualty.—On Monday the 1st inst., while Mr. Jones Littlejohn, riding some eight miles north-west of this place was engaged in hauling some timber for a crib, a portion of it slipped under his horse, causing them to run away, by which he was thrown from the wagon, and severely injured, so that he died in about one hour. Mr. Littlejohn was a worthy, honest and industrious citizen, and his death sincerely regretted by all who knew him. He leaves a wife and several children.

REG. Life Insurance is getting to be a big thing in this country. For further information on the subject we refer you gentle reader, to our Mutual friend Capt. J. M. Renfro, who is versed in Insurance lore, and likes to meet his friends and talk with them. He has been absent for some time, but judging from his general appearance we would say, that he had visited a land of plenty, and met with some first class risks, as well as good cheer.

SIGH THEY COME.

E. L. Woodward & Son are still receiving additions to their splendid stock of new Fall and Winter Goods. Call and see them and be suited in both quality and price—and be sure to examine the new patent Parabola Needles, the best ever invented.

REG. Farnham's instant relief and cure for Asthma, may now be obtained at Dr. Francis' Drug Store. Those afflicted with this distressing and dangerous malady ought not to fail to give it a trial.

REG. CARROLL & HUGHES, have removed their store one door north, and have just received a large and fine stock of Fall and Winter Goods. See their advertisement in another column.

EXAMINATION DAY at Shady Glen Academy.

July 17th, 1869.

Mr. Grant.—Let this once hallowed region speak to the Literary world, and thereby disabuse the Public of an error that it has fallen into, that the sum of literature exists not here. This region is appropriately called "Bit Nose," from the fact that the "Boys" when they used to take a twist at a Court Ground on an election, It was said that an old man living on the way side, used to call out "the Electors would be returning home on an election day, "Who Fit?" taking quite an interest in the events of the day. Those were the times we used to enjoy in the old Republic, when fighting and voting were free things. Every one thinking his own construction on the then constitution just and right. But to be serious and respectful too, you will allow the writer to let you learn something of the Rev. John Myatt, who has illustrated to this country what can be done in the way of learning at his "Shady Glen Academy," which is the subject of my theme. It is situated one mile south of Polkville Iron Works, on the hills field of action of the energetic Noah Goode, now a stock of snuffing rags, on the road that was scoured by the Red-Gen. Roseau, and near the house of Elihu Weaver Esq., where the fine Lamps were also kindled, and placed to his property by the hands of manufacturing soothsayers.

Cone Creek really seems to be the Picturesque Spring of Calhoun Co. At its fountain before it enters Cone Creek, we see Miss Rosey Fawcett, with a needle and thread, teaching Mary May, the schoolroom. The two rooms, the Picturesque and Academic, are in meadowlike the water dress, H. CRAWFORD & CO., 413 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Then comes my friend, the classic Mitchell, who is well known on the theatrical board of Jacksonville. Farther on the same stream comes our good fellow citizen, Mr. Peace, whose fame as a teacher has already been sung in the Republican's columns. Then, "Lahiter et Laheter," we find on the same stream the hero of this entertainment Mr. Myatt, holding forth at Shady Glen Academy. We had the pleasure of looking on at the morning exercises, which were conducted with system and order. Mr. Myatt has certainly blend in his character as a dispeleianian, order and system, and has read the lines of Milton, "Order is heaven's first law, And Tis confessed." Whilst in the army he must have studied tactics under Gen. Hardee. He is a tactician in every sense of the Word; for the writer looked on whilst they counter marched the thing well, having great regard to the economy of time, which Franklin says is money.—The scholars were nicely seated under a shady bower along side of the Academy, their feet resting on old, mother earth, well carpeted. The audience being seated in the house, with their faces turned toward the Rostrum, toward which now and again we could see the pupils, "marching up in order." First in the class in Intellectual Arithmetic, the writer saw the stately and dignified broad-shouldered Mr. John Wilkins, with good looks and marked dignity. Then little Master Simon Weaver, who had the thing at his tongue's end. The third in the class was Miss Bettie Bagley, with all the sweetness of innocence, answering every question correctly. One question being, What would a certain number of hats come to at a stipulated price, was answered so promptly, that we of the audience called out, that she was entitled to a beautiful new hat from her guardian, who being an orphan Weaver, who had the thing at his tongue's end.

A Horrible Discovery.

Three Skeletons Discovered Beneath the Walls of a House.—A Ghastly Inscription upon the Wall.

Early in the spring three skeletons were found under a house in Parkersville, under the following circumstances:

A boy, son of the people living in the house, had borrowed an axe of a neighbor, which, in stead of returning, he had placed under a rock, forming part of the wall of the building. Some time after, being asked by the neighbors what he had done with the axe, he told them where he had placed it. On going to the spot, and digging away the stone to obtain the axe, a human skull was brought to light. Further investigation by digging resulted in the startling discovery of three human skeletons of men, only covered with a slight depth of earth. The neck of one were found to be studded with gold rings, proving that the skeletons belonged to white persons.

The excitement by so horrible a discovery was intense, and only recently had it subsided.

Fresh horror is now added to it by a discovery, which may throw some light on the terrible mystery.

On Monday last, a little girl, daughter of the family at present residing in the house, went to a closet to hang up some clothing. Instead of coming out immediately, as almost every body would, and as usually a great many had done who had visited the desecrated premises, she turned round to the narrow closet and started to walk forward and thus out of it, when her attention was attracted by some writing on the wall before her, which for the reasons above stated had escaped the notice of those who had previously visited the closet. Calling the attention of the family to it, they were horrified to find the following:

"John Brink, California, Mo. Should I not get away with my life, will some one report me to Dr. M. Cotter, California, Mo. They are trying to murder us. Feb. 2, 1857."

Undoubtedly this has a connection with the bodies under the building, and may lead to some developments which will show that the number most foul was committed, and that one of the skeletons found was that of the writer of the above, and the others of companions who he undoubtedly were with.

The idea occurs to us that these men may have been "Free Statemen" either on their way to or kidnapped from Kansas in '57, and killed by "border ruffians." But speculations are needless, for many theories might be advanced, and none of them be correct.

The house in 1857 stood isolated from all others upon a hill. Now other buildings surround it, and the hill is graded down. But at the time indicated by the writing discovered in the closet, the building was so far removed from others that a foul murder could have been done without惊动ing any of the neighborhood. The proprietor at the time is still living in the county, but many different families have since lived in it. This man, it is stated, was then considered an upright man, and although suspicion must now point very strongly towards him, the people of that section do not think it possible that he is the murderer.

The building is now owned by a brother-in-law of our informant, who is a citizen of Leavenworth, and by whom the above writing in the closet was copied from the wall.

We shall look for further developments to throw light upon this horrible affair.

A Simile.

BY LONGFELLOW.
Slowly, slowly up the wall
Steals the sunshine, steals the shade;
Evening damps begin to fall,
Evening shadows are displayed.
Round me, o'er me, everywhere,
All the sky is grand with clouds;
And, ah! the evening air
Wheats the swallows home in crowds.
Shafts of sunshine from the west
Paint the dusky windows red;
Darker shadows, deeper rest,
Underneath and overhead.
Darker, darker, and more wan,
In my breast the shadows fall;
Upward steals the life of man.
As the sun-flood from the wall,
From the wall into the sky,
Ah, the souls of those that die
Are but sunbeams lifted higher.

"Lift a Little."

One day while walking up the street, I saw a short distance before me quite a small boy carrying a large basket. It seemed very heavy, for the little fellow was bending and staggering under its weight, yet he went resolutely forward, only stopping occasionally to change it from one hand to the other.

He was poorly clad, and as he turned his head I recognized him as the son of a poor widow who was obliged to work very hard to earn food and clothing for herself and her two little boys. My heart ached for the brave little fellow who was laboring so early to bear life's burdens, and I wanted to help him. "Lift a little," he seemed to say to the passer-by, as he struggled with his load.

Soon I heard rapid footsteps behind me, and in a moment, a bright-faced boy, the only son of a professor in one of our colleges, passed me. When he reached the little boy, who was still bending under his burden, he stretched out his hand, and taking hold of the basket, bore on his strong arm the larger share of the burden until he reached his own home.

How I honored the brave boy for his kind act! I knew his own heart was beating a happy measure, for we are never so happy as when doing something to make others happy. And as the widow's son went struggling on, I knew his burden seemed less heavy, that for a little while it had been borne for him. His heart was lighter, too, because another had showed him kindness, and the memory of that little act would be a bright spot to him in many a toiling day. It cost a little, the act of thoughtful kindness, but how much happiness it brought.

Dear children, learn a lesson from the conduct of this noble boy. Do not, because you have kind parents, a pleasant home, and so many things to make life sweet to you, neglect or speak unkindly to those on whom God has not bestowed so much. Help them to bear their burdens in every way that you can, and be willing even to die yourself to help those in need.

But perhaps I am writing to some one who poor or sick. If so, let me say that even you can be a burden bearer. Do you not know, some one in greater need than yourself, to whom you might give a helping hand? If you have nothing else to give, you can at least give kind words and pleasant smiles to all.

Cut Feed for Stock.—An accurate farmer has furnished a statement of his experience with feeding out feed and meat to his horses, accompanied with weighing and measuring. He cuts out straw about an inch long with a rawhide cylinder machine, and this chopped straw is then treated with corn meal and bran mixed in about equal quantities as to weight, so that each horse has about a bushel of corn feed, and three quarts of meal and bran, twice each day. Sometimes hay is cut instead of cut straw, or both are mixed. It is found that 200 pounds per week of corn meal and bran, added to the corn feed, will keep a pair of working horses in the best condition. This, he is satisfied from experiment, is less than two-thirds the cost of keeping them on meat, dry hay, and whole grain. The corn meal alone is not good for horses, as when diluted with bran, it becomes a mean meal of ground oats. The older is cut by horse power on a swing or spade, and stored in large bins, so as to furnish always a supply.

HORRIBLE OUTRAGE.—A late number of the Montgomery Advertiser says, of the negro who recently violated the person of a young lady in Pike county:

We have since learned that he was captured near Linwood, the present terminus of the M. & A. R. R., on Saturday last. He was carried to the place where he committed the crime, and on Sunday was taken out by the neighbors and friends of the outraged person, and hung to the limb of a tree until he was dead. The negro was named George Gilmore, and has recently been in the employ of Messrs. Webb & Brown, planters, near Thomasville. The lady, Mrs. Brown and wife of the negro's late employer, was riding in a buggy with a young lady last Thursday.—They were surprised by the negro jumping into the buggy and clasping them in his arms. He stopped the buggy.

He made desperate efforts to effect his hellish purpose on the young lady; but she was strong enough to resist successfully, receiving a broken arm in the struggle. He then made his attack on the mother, who was a very delicate and weak lady, was too exhausted to offer any aid, but screamed with all her power. The negro took the ladies and threw them together by the hair. He then left them and made his way to the woods. The ladies soon spread the news, and the neighbors and friends being thoroughly aroused made a vigorous search, with the success stated above.

JOSH BILLINGS ON HORNETS.—The hornet is an inflammable bug, sudden in his impetuosity and hasty in his conduct, &c. &c.

Its natural disposition is a warm, cross between red pepper in the pod, and fusil oil, and his moral bias is, "git out of my way."

They have a long, black body, divided in the middle by a waist spot, but their plumb importance lays at the terminus of their subsub, in the shape of a javelin. This javelin is always loaded, and stands ready to unload at a min's warning; and enters a man az still as though it wuz lighting, and az full ov melancholy az the toothache.

Hornets never argy a case; they settle asv or their differences ov opinion by letting their javelin fly, and are az surtian to hit az a min's.

Hornets build their nests wherever they take a noshun to, and seldom are disturbed, for what would it profit a man (ew kill 99 hornets and have the 100th hit him with its javelin).

They build their nests of paper, without any windows to them or lack door.—They have but one place of admission, and the nest is the shape of an overgrown pineapple, and is cut up into just as many bedrooms as there az hornets.

It is very simple to make a hornets' nest if you can, but will wagger emu man 300 dollars he kant bld one. But he could sell to a hornet for half price.

Hornets are az bizzaz az their second cousins, the bee, but what they are about the Lord only knows. The don't lay up any honey, nor carry money; they seem to be bizzaz only just for the sake of working all the time; they are always in az much or a hurry as the they was going for doktor.

Opening of the Coosa River.

To the Southern Commercial Convention: The attention of the convention is respectfully called to the question of opening the Coosa river, for continuous navigation from Rome, Ga., to the Gulf of Mexico by the Alabama river, a work of great importance to the Gulf States as well as the country at large.

The general characteristics of this water course are:

1. The distance between Rome, Ga., and Mobile, Ala., is about 700 miles.

2. The difference of level between low water mark at Rome and tide water of the Gulf is 500, giving a general slope per mile of foot 0.81.

3. The upper and navigable portion of the Coosa river from Rome, Ga., to Greensport, Ala., is 180 miles.

4. The lower portion of the Coosa river, partly shoaly, partly navigable, between Greensport and its junction with the Alabama river at Wetumpka, is 134 miles.

5. The distance between Wetumpka and Mobile, navigable at all seasons, is 256 miles.

6th. Summing up the two portions navigable 566 miles, and their whole fall is 345.5 feet, which gives an average of 0.61 feet per mile.

Various estimates have been made as to the cost of opening the river, of $500,000 to $2,000,000, but it were even more it is a matter of small importance, if we consider the magnitude of the object to be attained.

The Coosa and Alabama rivers made one continuous channel for traffic, presents a distance of 700 miles through territory which abounds in stone coal and iron ores of the finest qualities, mafettes of various kinds, mafites, flagging stones, fine lithographic, gray and sand stones, and a variety of other minerals.

Capital and transportation are only wanted to make this section an immense workshop, capable of giving employment to thou and of mechanics, and to turn out over $100,000,000 of produce of every description.

If we consider the 566 miles on each side of the river, a distance at which the effects will be felt materially, we find an area of 28,000 miles, 18,000,000 acres, of which the Government of the United States owns several millions in the shape of public lands by this work cannot be less than $2 per acre, making an increase of $20,000,000 for the area.

All these facts taken by themselves or combined are sufficient to ascribe to this work a character of general and national interest and worthy a special consideration of the convention.

The Commercial Convention is respectfully requested to petition the United States Congress to appropriate the necessary funds to assist the States of Georgia and Alabama in carrying out this important work.

For the statistics and estimate contained in the above I am under obligation to General Eugene LeJard, Chief Engineer of the Seima, Rome and Dalton Railroad.

Respectfully, J. G. YEISER, of Ga., On Canoe, the River Navigation, &c.

The Loxley House Book furnishes the following hints, which owners of houses would do well to heed:

Many houses are made vicious from cat treatment.

Many houses fall from weariness than any other cause.

When a horse falls, he is more frightened than his rider.

A frightened animal cannot use its senses; & h. it must first be reassured by gentle treatment.

It is speed that kills the horse.

Careless application of the whip has blinded many horses.

Many horses are claimed from bad shoeing than from all other causes put together.

Never kick nor scream at a horse, nor jerk the bit in his mouth.

A Miracle of Honesty.—At a party one evening several contested the honor of having done the most extraordinary thing. A reverend gentleman was appointed chair of the respective pretensions.

O. P. O. D. E. his tailor's bill, with a receipt attached to it. A buzz went through the room that this could not be outdone, when

A second proved that he had just arrested his tailor for the money that was lost.

"The palm is his," was the generous reply, when the third gentleman put in his claim.

"Gentlemen," said he, "I cannot boast of feats of my predecessors, but I have returned to the owners two umbrellas they left at my house."

"I hear no more," cried the astonished arbitrators. This is the very acme of honesty; it is act of virtue of which I never knew any one capable.

The prize, "Hold!" cried another. "I have done still more."

"I have been taking my county paper for twenty years, and have paid for it every year in advance."

He took the prize.

A Milwaukee man turned a little girl out to shift for herself, giving her a cash capital of fifteen cents, with which to winter. His name is Mayer.
